MR. CLEMSON'S PARK

Fine Improvements on His Highland Ave. Property.

FORCE OF SIXTY MEN AT WORK.

Natural Beauties to be Preserved and Art to Add to the Attractiveness of His Large Woodland Tract.

The improvements which George N. Clemson contemplates and has already under way on his tract in the rear of his magnificent home on Highland avenue are of such an interesting character and of such proportions that vendors of the Argus will need of them with some of the pleasure which the owner is enjoying in carrying out his plans. Mr. Clemson, who is well known, owns a large tract of wooded land running from Carroll street, in the rear of his barns, and along Pomona-wealth ave. to a point not very far from the Birmingham turnpike. It extends westward until it takes in the ridge, and is wild and rough enough to suit the taste of the owner, who is passionately fond of outdoor life in wood and by stream. There is a pond in the valley which at one time was stocked with trout, and several coves of small land have been removed and the ponds filled. The present barns and wagon house are to be removed and new ones constructed further north, and then the woodland fence which now separates the residence from the park will be removed and an extensive lawn will lead to the new summer house. It is of rough field stone, (Mr. Clemson says he has got to use them up somehow), and is entered by broad steps of granite. Within, the plans are of such a nature that "no two parts overlapping seem alike."

The summer house, which is being constructed near the barns, is to be a marvel in architectural perfection. The present barns and wagon house are to be removed and new ones constructed further north, and then the woodland fence which now separates the residence from the park will be removed and an extensive lawn will lead to the new summer house. It is of rough field stone, (Mr. Clemson says he has got to use them up somehow), and is entered by broad steps of granite. Within, the plans are of such a nature that "no two parts overlapping seem alike."

West of the summer house is another spring house. A never-failing spring is turned into this house by piping, and the overflow runs into a cool pool, with prettily curved banks. The pool is cemented and walled and a margin of tall grass will conceal its artificiality. This is a very pretty idea but it is not as easily as the "bee-hive spring."

Mr. Clemson says: "I designed that spring, Mr. Lindsey doesn't want to build it." The spring is made of rough white stones built up into the form of a round bee hive, and spring water is piped up the interior, and bubbles over invitingly to the visitor, through a hole in the top.

The plans which will be followed in carrying out his ideas are not yet all completed. He doesn't know where they will stop, sixty men are at work under his personal supervision, making what in a few years will be second to no private park in the State. It is not intended to make the spot a place of drives and walks, instead the place will have the freedom of nature about it all, which will make it all the more attractive.

Forty acres of this tract is to be opened up with a strong protective fence, and tramps who now cross it and poster one section or the city will have a long walk around. The tract to be thus converted into a family retreat will extend in a northerly direction.

Mr. Clemson, brown and smiling, was helping some laborers pull a big stone out of the ground with a movable tackle when asked by an Argus reporter to tell of some of his plans. He stated that he was merely clearing the undergrowth and stones from his tract, but the least imagination you could see a perspective of what is to be. Aries of the wild apple growth which comes up after the late December Burns spread the powder from his famous distillery upon the ground have been removed, and only trees which will grow into stately foliage are left behind. Stones enough to keep the city's engineers pondering away for months have been carted away and used in dams and fits the magnitude of which astounds the casual observer and there are lots of stones left yet. Boulders which catch and hold the eye have been left when their presence enhanced the surroundings at any particular spot. One particular boulder, in which nature has formed a perfect basin, has been placed on a solid rock and an old but not uncomfortable-looking seat is made. One of the trees is growing up in healthiness, and a pretty little grove will soon be formed there. One section of the tract is to be a trout garden, and further from the house are acres of garden supplies. The grass will grow neatly, and there are areas which can be plowed for any purpose.

In a maple near this, Mr. Clemson has built a constructed a summer house. It will hold four persons comfortably, and is swayed by iron rods fastened in heavy timbers above. Persons cannot be seen in it through the dense foliage and it is all that could be desired in the form of a retreat. A larger platform for the ladies is to be built near the water tower.

These and other attractive little nooks and crannies are to be made ready as rapidly as possible, this season, but the observatory, for which Mr. Lindsey is drawing plans in a private office, Mr. Clemson has fitted up for him on the platform so frequently, that a scheme has been arranged to continue the fun with out the annoyances. Under a spacious maple a platform has been built. It is octagonal shape with very grotesque steps upon it, and all surrounded by a railing just high enough to keep the dogs out. It makes a charming reading retreat for the ladies.

Only the housewife, who has a family to look after, the household duties to perform, the servants to direct, the planning of the meals, the marketing, and a hundred and one other things to occupy her mind and demand her attention during the day, knows what a terrible strain all this is on mind and body, and what an immense amount of energy and vitality a successful performance of these duties require. Is it any wonder, then, that many good wives have more work to do than they have strength to perform? They find it impossible to give their household the attention that it should have. They must have assistance, and

ON THE TIP OF THE TONGUE

A man who called on Capt. Totten's Friday night, passed a bit of pleasure with him and finally, in discussing the amount of green corn the visitor could eat against that which the captain could eat, said with the latter said, "I used to be able to eat anything, and a good deal of it, when I was a boy."

What were you, boy?"
Down at Fortville?"

"I was a boy." "I was a boy?"
Well, I'm his son." "You are a boy?"

"Yes, I am." "Then that boy over there, Charley John, he's your own cousin?"

"No."

"Yes, he is. Your mother and his father were brother and sister."

There were handshakings and then it turned out that the visitor had been a summer guest in the Oregon Trim for a number of years, and until Friday night did he know that his uncle, the well-known New York messenger, W. John, was living here.

Speaking about "Charley" John's cousin not knowing him, Ben Wolf of Utica said it is just the opposite. He went down to a steamer dock a few days ago and picked his own brother whom he had never seen before out of 700 passengers.

Quite a number of people who love cold water, have stumbled to the fact that the O. & W. do not drink tank water filled with spring water by night which comes from Utica and there is the best drinking water in town. Some of them have got so that they can swim into the places where it is kept and help them. It is without a twinge of conscience but others only look at it and comment upon its purity. The O. & W. folks always up to date provide drinking tanks with interior tanks so that the water is all around it but it is contaminated with melted unclean ice.

THE

NEW YORK WORLD

THREE-A-WEEK EDITION.

Practically a Daily at the Price of a Weekly.

The striking and important events of the last year have established the overwhelming value of The Three-a-Week World to every reader. For an almost nominal sum it has kept its subscribers informed of the progress of all our wars, and, moreover, has reported them as promptly and fully as it was it daily. With our interests still extending throughout the world, with our troops operating in the Philippines, and the great Presidential campaign, too, at hand, its value is further increased.

The motto of The Three-a-Week World is improvement. It strives each year to be better than it was the year before, and public confidence in it is shown by the fact that it now circulates more than twice as many papers every week as any other newspaper, not a daily, published in America.

We offer this unequalled newspaper and The Mercury together one year for $2. The regular subscription price of the two papers is $2.50.
